Welcome to In & Beyond Bath

In & Beyond Bath was founded to enable curious, discerning travellers to discover the England that I – a former history and politics teacher and traveller – love and revere, shared in the way I would want my own friends and family to experience it.

As well as a warm, personal style, our transformative approach to touring is designed to take our guests on a truly extraordinary journey of discovery into the very essence of our region's culture, landscapes, heritage, people, experiences and cuisine. We combine the 'must-sees' with the unsung treasures we know will invoke awe and inspiration. We share the very best and breadth of our fabulous region, combining anecdotes, stories, connections and surprises to ensure every experience we deliver is unforgettable and engaging from start to finish.

Our guides are different too. Highly intelligent, emotionally aware and experienced individuals, they are as excited as I am to share our fabulous region, meet new people and bond through shared experience, discussion and a desire to connect and learn. They don't merely repeat a formula, but adjust every experience to suit the interests and needs of the guests they care for.

Finally, our core business approach is different. We aim for 'win-win-win'. We believe our business is only a success if it works for our guests, team members, and the communities and environment where we tour. It is only by balancing our goals in these areas that we feel we've achieved success. Therefore, we aim to transform every aspect of business, empowering and developing our team, working alongside local communities and partners, and making environmental sustainability and community engagement integral to the way we work.

As our rapidly growing reputation and testimonials show, our unique approach to local travel is transforming the concept of the tour.

We hope you'll join us and fall in love with our region too.

I'm Jules, the Founder of In & Beyond Bath. I returned home from teaching in Zambia in 2016 with a dream of providing the kind of tour that I seek when I travel, focused on those things that I love about my home country and missed whilst I was away. Our approach to touring eschews the tired, impersonal, repetitive mass-tourism formula for one based upon relationships, discovery, connection and meaning.

Why visit Bath?

Bath is a very special destination, and one that offers a unique experience to visitors. The city and its surrounds are located within two areas of outstanding natural beauty, The Cotswolds and The Mendips, and the entire urban area of the city is inscribed as a UNESCO World Heritage site, the only example in of its kind in the UK.

Bath's natural thermal springs, which attracted the Romans to establish the settlement around 50AD continue to attract visitors to bathe in the spring waters. And while you can enjoy the waters and therapeutic treatments at the Thermae Bath Spa today, you can also visit the original Roman Baths and stand in footsteps of visitors from 2,000 years ago.

The Roman Baths sit comfortably alongside the historic Bath Abbey, the site of the coronation of King Edgar, the first king of England in 973AD. However, it is the stunning Georgian architecture of Bath that the city is most famous for, with its sweeping crescents and honey coloured Bath stone buildings.

If it feels like being enveloped within a Jane Austen novel or a period drama, it is not a surprise given that Jane Austen herself resided in Bath and set two novels here. You can learn more about her and her life at the Jane Austen Centre or visit during the Jane Austen festival. Bath itself is often used as a location for film and TV, most recently as the setting for Bridgerton but also featuring in Les Misérables, The Duchess and Vanity Fair.

Jane Austen is not the only writer to create classics while staying in Bath. Mary Shelley wrote most of Frankenstein while staying in the city in 1816 and in 2021, a new visitor experience, Mary Shelley's House of Frankenstein, opened to the public, celebrating the author and her creation.

Culture enthusiasts will also be excited by the number of museums and galleries located in and around the city. For a small, walkable city there are a wide range of small museums celebrating the city's social history as well as celebrating monumental discoveries. Both the Holburne and the Victoria Art Gallery host world-class exhibitions alongside local artists.

Cultural visits are not limited to the day as the city offers up pre-West End theatre at the Theatre Royal and is home to many classical and contemporary musical events and festivals. Its annual cultural programme is rich and diverse with carnivals, colour and the UK's finest Christmas market, celebrating small local artisan producers.

Being a small urban centre surrounded by stunning countryside, there is an incredible array of local food and drink to discover – even including visits to the producers. A number of local cheese producers, vineyards, gin distilleries, bakeries, cider makers and craft breweries offer tours and experiences for foodies. There are excellent food tours exploring historical and modern-day favourites, with the not-to-be-missed Sally Lunn's, reputedly the oldest house in Bath and home to the famous Sally Lunn bun.

Bath's hospitality extends to the favourite English pub. Nestled in and among the cobbled streets, enjoy a warm welcome and hearty food, all washed down with a pint of local beer. Don't miss the country pubs too, with breathtaking views or riverside inns for a feel of yesteryear. And if you prefer your drinks a little more contemporary, there are plenty of sophisticated cocktails and elegant wine bars. A warm welcome will also be waiting for you at one of Bath's many luxury and boutique hotels, guest houses or holiday lets.

From the natural thermal waters at the Gainsborough Hotel & Spa to the majesty of the Royal Crescent Hotel & Spa, these are truly destination hotels. In recent years the emergence of quirky boutique hotels offer sumptuous and decadent surroundings with incredible attention to detail, including The Bird and No 15 Great Pulteney. For those wanting the comfort of familiar brand, Hilton and Marriott are also represented.

Bath's independent hotel and guest houses really offer a luxurious home from home, including award-winning The Queensberry Hotel and its Michelin starred Olive Tree Restaurant. And if your preference is more rural, stunning countryside destination hotels surround the city including the five star Bath Priory, quirky Homewood or The Pig.

A visit to Bath offers 2,000 years of history with one of the UK's most vibrant cultural scenes, wrapped in stunning natural landscapes and the warmest of welcomes. We've been welcoming visitors for 2,000 years and we can't wait to welcome you!

History

During the 1700s, as Britain began to emerge as a global power on account of its burgeoning empire and industrial might, Bath found itself to be the fashionable residence for the new and more established wealthy classes to meet and connect. As a result, Bath was transformed from an unimportant medieval town known for its springs by visiting lepers hoping for a cure, to becoming a playground for the rich and famous and the birthplace of a new imperial, classical architecture with the region's golden limestone taking centre stage.

In & Beyond Bath

1 The Wye Valley 1 hour from Bath
 This steep-sided, wooded river valley has served as the border between England and Wales for over a millenia. The river's banks are home to some of Britain's most extraordinary medieval gems, the great Cistercian Abbey at Tintern, and the towering fortress of 1000-year-old Chepstow Castle, scene of numerous bloody dramas throughout the centuries.

2 The Cotswolds 1 hour from Bath
 This beloved region of England had its heyday in the Middle Ages when English wool was highly prized and sold into Europe along the Silk Road and Arabic Empire to the Far East. In decline from the 1600s onwards following the discovery of the Americas and the growth of the cotton trade, the open, rolling hills, ancient settlements, grand estates and thatched roofs provide an extraordinary insight into a distant past.

3 Bristol 40 minutes from Bath
 Britain's main western port historically and linked to London by the ancient King's Road (The Great West Way) and the world's first long distance passenger railway, the Great Western Railway, Bristol is one of England's most buzzing and eclectic cities. Founded on seafaring, and later, grown wealthy on the back of the slave trade, Bristol today is a metropolitan and fascinating destination boasting an array of industries. Enjoy the art galleries, eateries and museums that line the historic docks, or stroll past the Georgian facades of Clifton to admire the view from the world's first suspension bridge. Discover the city's aeronautical past with a visit to Concorde at Filton aerodrome, or enjoy the shopping and sumptuous dining the city has to offer.

4 Somerset 30 minutes from Bath
 This stunning, rural county south of Bath is home to breathtaking countryside & natural phenomena like Cheddar Gorge and the Mendip Hills; Britain's smallest medieval city, Wells; Glastonbury – a pilgrimage destination for Christians and Pagans alike, and much more. Lacking the fame of the Cotswolds, Somerset is a stunning destination for visitors looking to experience rural England away from the tourists.

5 North Wessex Downs 1 hour from Bath
 These extraordinary grasslands mark the transition in the British Isles from a hunter-gatherer based society to the early beginnings of a settled society. The region is littered with prehistoric marvels: stone circles, burial tombs, ancient pathways, mysterious structures and Iron Age hill forts. The landscapes are breathtaking and still evoke a long lost era that predates even the Romans' arrival 2000 years ago.

Why Bath is the ideal base to discover 'Authentic' England from.

Bath is the ideal base for visitors looking to discover the very essence of authentic England – its culture, landscapes, history, cuisine, people and much more.

The region around Bath boasts a huge variety in terms of landscapes, places of interest and hidden treasures. Every direction from the city offers something different. The Cotswolds lie to the north and north-east. The prehistoric landscapes of the Marlborough Downs and Salisbury plains, home to the great stone circles of Stonehenge and Avebury are to the east and south-east. To the south lies the stunning countryside of Somerset, as well as medieval marvels including Glastonbury and Wells, and the dramatic limestone caves and views of Cheddar Gorge, whilst to the west sits the historic, yet vibrant city of Bristol, and the Welsh borderlands, home to some of the UK's most enchanting medieval ruins and picturesque landscapes.

Throughout the region are stunning pubs and inns, beloved by locals, but off the beaten track, that are historic, evocative and serve the most exquisite food and incredible local ales.

Whether it's history, nature, cultural connections or something else that you are looking to encounter during your time in England, you can be guaranteed that you'll find the best and breadth of authentic England around Bath.

Before leaving Bath, be sure to explore all it has to offer on a bespoke In Bath Walking Tour.

See page 28 for more details.

Prehistory

The Bath region is home to some of England's greatest prehistoric gems, including Stonehenge, and the mysterious stone circle at Avebury. Nearby are 6000 year old tombs (that can be entered), burial mounds, Iron Age hill forts and other wonders from our distant past.

Medieval Marvels

From 1000 year old abbeys, to Gothic masterpieces such as Wells Cathedral, to perfectly preserved medieval villages like Lacock and Castle Combe, the Bath region is home to some of England's greatest medieval monuments. Explore marvels such as the great castle at Chepstow, the ruined abbey at Tintern or one of any number of extraordinary, ancient churches that are littered across the landscape, harking back to a very different time.

Gardens, Countryside and Landscapes

For lovers of nature and horticulture, the Bath region is awash with the very best of gardens that traverse the styles and historical periods. For lovers of formal, landscape, cottage, walled, Italianate gardens or something else, some of the best in the world can be found in the Bath area. A visit to Stourhead Estate and Gardens is a breath-taking experience, as is a wander through the maples at Westonbirt Arboretum in the autumn.

The countryside around Bath is also exquisite, made of fields, hedgerows and ancient settlements reached by tiny lanes with the Cotswolds, Somerset, and the hills of Wiltshire all possessing their own unique feel.

Fabulous towns and settlements

The West Country is home to some of England's most evocative towns and villages. Towns like Bradford-on-Avon, Frome, Corsham, Tetbury and Malmesbury are historic, vibrant and filled with hidden wonders and fabulous independent stores making them ideal stops for really connecting with everyday life in authentic England, away from the tourist hordes.
